SURVEY OF VALLEY REVEALS ACTIVE PROGRAM OF WORK

Irrigation Projects Represent $600,000 of Total Home Construction $358,000

HARLINGEN, Tex., May 16—More than $134,000 worth of irrigation work has been started in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. The work has been started at various locations along the river, and the projects are expected to be completed by the end of the year.

The work is being done by contractors who have been awarded contracts by the State Water Conservation Board. The projects are expected to provide irrigation for about 10,000 acres of land.

STEEL FRAMEWORK USED ON COLONIAL

Bexar County Showing New Construction Trend in Jefferson Manor House

Recently the new trend for wood-framed homes has been switched to steel-framed homes. These homes are built on a steel framework, which is then covered with a solid concrete slab. The steel framework is identical with those used in wood-framed homes.

The first floor of this proposed project is not included in the $72,341 sidewalk, curb, and drainage project in the city. Work is now being done for improvements at Filmore Co.
